Feb. 5 "Strong Identity Supports Diversity," Rev. Sam Trumbore

The most rigid and regressive religious traditions often are the most culturally and racially diverse. What supports their diversity is a very strong sense of identity and boundaries. Can we both welcome everyone and grow a more diverse congregation through building a stronger identity?

Feb. 12 "Faith in Group Selection," Rev. Sam Trumbore

Come celebrate Darwin's birthday! Unitarian Universalists claim him as one of our prophets. This service will highlight part of Darwin's thinking that gets less attention but is very relevant to religious communities.

Feb. 19 "Rescuing a Jesus for Liberals to Love," Rev. Sam Trumbore

Strip away the constrictive and outdated Christian theologies (aka Paul) and seek the voice of Jesus himself. The radical message of Jesus is just as challenging today to the American Empire as it was to the Roman Empire and the Jews of his day who colluded with Roman oppression.

Feb. 26 "What Can I Expect? What are the Limits?" Rev. Sam Trumbore

This month we've been reflecting on how having a covenant could be good for Albany UU. It can be very helpful for visitors, friends and new members to better understand what commitments we make to each other that form our relational identity. It can also enhance trust between current members that deepens our shared commitment.

Sam's Outlook

The Imperative of Self-Definition

Rev. Sam Trumbore

When I hear a comment about us (that I expect you've heard too) it bothers me. Every time I hear this statement I strive to correct it: "You can believe anything you want and be a Unitarian Universalist."

I don't criticize the person for holding that view. I fear we inadvertently send that implicit message when we inform people we are a religious organization that does not require a specific belief for membership. And you certainly don't need to believe in God to participate here. That could give the appearance that just about any belief is acceptable here.

That is just not true.

Let me list for you some beliefs that are not acceptable here:

- ◆ White supremacy
- ◆ Patriarchy
- ◆ Xenophobia
- ◆ Sexual abuse is okay
- ◆ Murder, stealing and lying are acceptable social behaviors
- ◆ Self-harming behaviors are fine
- ◆ The rich owe nothing to society
- ◆ The poor are undeserving wretches
- ◆ It's okay to treat the earth like a supply house and a sewer

I could go on but you get the idea. There are lots of beliefs that are not acceptable here. But that statement persists, becomes a way to mock us and undermines the beauty and magnificence of our way of doing religion.

The confusion comes from our radical respect for individual thought, growth and development. We reject the Christian idea that we need to hold correct beliefs and embrace certain creeds to be acceptable to God, Jesus and the Holy Spirit. Rather than becoming the thought police, we are focused on identifying wholesome and beneficial behaviors. We care far more about what people do rather than what people think.

For example, I personally don't care what is going on in your mind when you show someone kindness or act in a generous way. If you do it because you believe Jesus loves you, great. If you do it because Zoltan has directed you to do it, hooray. If you've done a rational analysis of prosocial behavior and see that, on average, you derive benefits from a social order that is cooperative, you have my praise too. What matters most is what you do, not how you think about it.

Behavioral norms generally are expressed in our purposes and principles as statements of value. We value the inherent worth and dignity of all people. We value compassion and equity in human relations. We value the interdependent web of existence of which we are a part. This way of defining our religious identity doesn't translate well to a Christian dominated community. In their worldview, values line up with belief. If you say you believe in God, then I can expect a set of Christian values from you. It is almost a short hand for a specific Biblical social contract laid out in the Ten Commandments. If they encounter people who don't believe in God, Christians might be uncertain if they can trust them. They are unsure about having an expectation or making a claim on an atheist's social behavior.

The diversity project that Unitarian Universalists have embraced to organize our identity is a vision of world community that allows people of different beliefs to live together in peace. Rather than starting from a value set defined by one religious tradition, we are striving to form a value set that arises from the wide intersection of religious traditions as well as secular orientations. As we know from the pillars within our own tradition and congregations, you certainly don't need to be a believer in God to be a highly moral and ethical person. And you can be a devout believer and be a despicable human being.

Stewardship – the big picture

Every year at this time we begin our annual Stewardship Campaign. During the Campaign we will be asking members and friends to make pledges that will support Albany UU's continuing growth and success. Pledges made will fund our operations from July 1, 2017 to June 30, 2018. This is a special year because we are celebrating the 175th Anniversary of our congregation and we are also celebrating the 10th Anniversary of Emerson Community Hall. You will be hearing much more about the Campaign over the coming months, so please consider what Albany UU means to you and practice generosity.

Music Director search: Good and bad news

Your Music Director Search Committee is pleased to announce that we have found a wonderful Music Director by the name of Kathleen (Kathy) Bawel (Bah-well) who will be joining our staff February first. She teaches music at St. Rose, coming north from Florida where she taught music in the public schools for 34 years and served as music director in a Lutheran Church. She is delighted to be with us as she senses she has been a UU for many years. If you were present for the January 22 service, you'll know how well she was received by our community.

Now for the bad news. Her husband has accepted a position in the Rochester area starting this summer. This means she will only be with us for four months. But we plan to make the most of her time with us. We will be taking up the search again for someone to start in September. If you know of anyone out there who might be interested in the posi-

Leader Orientation: working effectively with Albany UU staff

This one-hour session at 11:45 AM on Sunday, Feb. 5, is for any volunteer who has a need to interact with staff and would like to know more about how that works. Snacks will be provided. Questions? Talk with one of the facilitators: Jan McCracken, Amy Lent, or Dick Dana. Call the office to sign up.

From the St. Lawrence District to the Central East Region

After many years of deliberation and planning, delegates to the St. Lawrence District Assembly in April 2016 voted overwhelmingly to take the final step to adopt a regional organization. Our Central East Region encompasses four former districts of the Unitarian Universalist Association. The complex process of dissolving the St. Lawrence District was officially completed in December 2016.

In reality, Albany UU has been working successfully with the Central East Region for the last several years. The region gives our congregation access to a staff of 13 full-time professionals who work for the UUA, with a designated primary contact for Albany UU. We've also deepened our connections with neighboring UU congregations through the Hudson Mohawk UU cluster.

My shorthand for this is to move people away from the belief question when I'm asked, "What do UU's believe?" I redirect their question to this answer, "We are a religious tradition of shared values rather than shared beliefs." That allows the conversation to move to our values that are likely to overlap, whereas our beliefs may not.

Our responsibility as a religious tradition is continually to define ourselves rather than avoid the question. That's why our UU leaders gather once a year for General Assembly. At those plenaries, we do the work of defining what we value passing resolutions, statements of conscience and actions of immediate witness. If you read these documents, you'll definitely recognize who we really are. (to find out more visit <http://www.uua.org/statements/years>)

I encourage you do check them out. If you do, I hope reading those statements will affirm and promote your UU identity.—Rev. Sam

Board notes

The arc of the moral universe

Ben English

After the recent election, the world and our nation are swirling in stormy seas. An era of political disruption is upon us. For some, faith in American democracy is undermined. The messy and disorderly fracas of politics over recent decades, where so much work towards social, environmental and economic justice was stymied or frustrated, may appear in retrospect as an era of stability when we could still believe that progress was possible, if only incrementally. If gains were small and uneven, at least the line was held against rollback of essential safety net programs. Fundamental environmental protections have survived, and awareness of man-made climate change is growing. Principles of race and gender equality have become more generally accepted, with rights like gay marriage established as new standards.

As I write, Barack Obama, a beacon to most UUs, is still president, and Martin Luther King Jr's birthday has just been celebrated. Obama has often quoted Dr King's famous statement of faith, "The arc of the moral universe is long, but it bends towards justice."¹

We should all know that Dr King was paraphrasing our own Rev. Theodore Parker, the 19th century Unitarian minister, who wrote in full: "I do not pretend to understand the moral universe; the arc is a long one, my eye reaches but little ways; I cannot calculate the curve and complete the figure by the experience of sight; I can divine it by conscience. And from what I see I am sure it bends towards justice."¹

Handed down to us from Parker, King and Obama, these words inspire hope in millions, and so they should. But do they lull us into thinking the arc of the moral universe is inevitable? Can it bend by itself? We cannot rest easy that it will bend as we hope. Theodore Parker, who struggled to abolish slavery knew this. Martin Luther King Jr, who struggled and in the end was a martyr for racial and economic justice, knew this. Obama, who faced unrelenting and vicious opposition in congress and elsewhere, knows this.

Now we are faced with newly empowered forces which have dedicated themselves to bending the moral arc away from justice. They are not so unified and organized as we might fear, but they are on the move, heady with triumph and convinced of a mandate to remake America in ways that will foster oppression of women, religious minorities, persons of color and non-conforming gender expression. These forces will also almost inevitably serve to concentrate power in the hands of the very rich, a terrible irony for a movement which masquerades as "populism".

If faith in our national politics is threatened, recall that in 1850 Theodore Parker also wrote that American democracy must be: "A government of all the people, by all the people, for all the people". These words were paraphrased by Abraham Lincoln in the Gettysburg Address. They inspire me to venture that Unitarian thinking is at the heart of American ideals of progressive government. And this must give us courage and will to maintain this heritage.

It gives us strength is to know that the liberal religious movement, as embodied in Unitarian Universalism, has always been a base for action towards achievement of justice. Any one of us may not be able to exert so much leverage as we might wish to bend the moral arc. But by uniting and supporting progressive institutions like ours we lay the foundation for resistance to reactionary forces, and for bringing to life our values and vision. As Unitarian Universalists, let us keep our eyes on the moral arc of the universe, and let us ensure that as an institution our Society remains in the forefront of bending that arc towards justice.

Quoting President Obama now, directly from his last email from the White House as president:

"And when the arc of progress seems slow, remember: America is not the project of any one person. The single most powerful word in our democracy is the word 'We.' 'We the People.' 'We shall overcome.'

Yes, we can."

Even as we embrace this new approach, we appreciate the long and distinguished history of the St. Lawrence District; many members of our congregation participated in district events and governance. On April 1, one of the St Lawrence District traditions will continue. At the May Memorial Society in Syracuse, Rev. Richard Gilbert will offer the 2017 Gould Lecture, titled “Singing Our Broken Hallelujahs: The Prophetic Imperative in a Messy World”. The day will begin with a live-streaming of the UUA Presidential Candidates’ Forum that is being held at Cedar Lane UU Church in Bethesda, Maryland. After the Gould Lecture, several workshops and focused discussion groups will follow the lecture.

Lunch will be provided and is included in the price of registration. The registration fees ($18 - $22 - $26) are on a sliding scale based on your assessment of your ability to pay. Those who pay at the higher level are making a donation to help others who aren’t able to pay the full fee. Register at <http://tinyurl.com/2017SLDGould> by March 26, 2017.

For those who can’t make it to Syracuse, watch for information about live-streaming of the Presidential Forum in the Capital Region!

Channing Hall art show: street photography by Fred Moody

Fred Moody is a freelance and event photographer based in Albany NY. He says “I bought my first camera when I was sixteen and shortly thereafter it was lost, but the love of photography still remains.” He has studied photography at Barrett House Arts Center, HVCC, and many photography workshops.

“The Windows Exhibit in Channing Hall is part of a street photography project I have been working on for several years. These are fashion windows from stores mostly on Fifth Ave, and stores in other parts of NYC. The windows take a lot of time and work to create and are truly artistic endeavors. For me, the Fashion Windows Exhibit is just one part of my street photography project but deserve a special place of its own:”

Growing Together

Getting to Know UU: orientation to UUism Saturday, Mar. 4, 8:45 AM-noon

We invite you to join us for “Getting to Know UU”. We’ll start with coffee and snacks and getting to know each other. You’ll learn about Unitarian Universalism and about our congregation, and you’ll get a chance to ask all the questions you’ve been collecting. We’ll talk about how to get involved in the Albany UU community and about becoming a member. All in all, it’s a fun morning of conversation and fellowship, and a pleasant first step on the path to

Religious Exploration

Leah Purcell, Director of Religious Education

The Soul Matters theme for February is Identity

When I was a teen, one of the worst things you could say about someone else was that they were “fake”. “She’s such a fake!” we would say when someone hurt us or if they got something (or someone) we coveted. And yet, by then, all of my friends and I were presenting different parts of ourselves to different people in different situations, alternately putting on masks of courage and humility, sorrow and happiness; weakness and power.

Do I contradict myself? Very well, then I contradict myself, I am large, I contain multitudes. ~Walt Whitman

How do we cultivate a healthy sense of identity for ourselves and help out children and youth to do the same? This is important, but messy work!

Afraid that our inner light will be extinguished or our inner darkness exposed, we hide our true identities from each other. In the process, we become separated from our own souls..” ~Parker Palmer

We adults might worry that encouraging children to have self-confidence might make them “too full of themselves”; or that we might encourage individualism in them and a sense of entitlement and selfishness. On the other hand we want our children to be resilient and stand up for themselves and others and to speak out. Having a strong identity can help children develop meaning and strong values.

“We are what we pretend to be, so we must be careful about what we pretend to be.” ~ Kurt Vonnegut

We want our congregation and our RE groups on Sunday mornings to be places where people can be their full selves. Indeed, our high school youth often say that our youth group is the only place where they can be their true selves without being judged and where they know that everyone is included. This means that they not only get to share their whole selves with the group, they must also make room for other people to do the same. Our youth are motivated to embody both our first and seventh UU Principle: that everyone is important and should be treated kindly and fairly.

Knowing yourself helps you know other people. As my colleague Kimberlee Tomczak Carlson explains, “Peoples’ identities are similar in some ways and different in others. This can make identities confusing. When we meet someone who has an identity we are unfamiliar with it can feel strange to us. Just like when we meet a new person or go to a new place for the first time. Learning how to be open to other people’s identities is an exciting and challenging part of being a good human. “

These are our challenges this month. Look for inspiration and resources for the important and messy work of forming and understanding identities this month in Sunday morning services, the stories the children hear in the service and in Sunday school, in parent group, The Sunday Sparkler (my weekly paper newsletter), bulletin boards and emails and Face Book posts. And look for opportunities to share your ideas with others either at Albany UU or on line.

In joyful service,

Leah

Mindfulness Meditation Workshop

led by Rev. Sam Trumbore

Saturday, Feb, 18

This meditation training and practice workshop will be led by Rev. Trumbore, on Saturday 8:00am to 3:00pm (no Friday this time). It gives the participants an opportunity to learn Buddhist mindfulness meditation techniques and/or refresh and deepen their meditation practice. All are welcome from first timers to experts. There will be a vegan potluck lunch on Saturday and all are encouraged to bring something to share. To register, see box. (A voluntary donation can be offered at the end.) Mark your calendars NOW!

Rev. Trumbore has practiced Buddhist Vipassana or insight meditation for over 30 years and is Past President of the Unitarian Universalist Buddhist Fellowship. This meditation technique is one of the best for Unitarian Universalists. It helps people train their minds to strengthen concentration and intensify moment-to-moment awareness. Regular practice of this technique quiets and sharpens the mind, opens the heart and can improve one's physical health. (future workshop: April 28-9).

Winter/Spring practice group for Nonviolent Communication starts Feb. 23

As we learn to speak from the heart we are changing the habits of a lifetime (Marshall Rosenberg).

It's not enough to only study a new language. To learn it means also practicing it by talking and listening to other people who are using it as well. Learning Nonviolent Communication (NVC) is no different. Anyone who has studied the basic model of NVC is invited to join this practice group which will meet twice a month on a drop-in basis. The foundation for the practice is built upon the lifelong work of Marshall Rosenberg. We plan to use the book, Connecting Across Differences, as a guide for our practice.

Facilitators will be Philomena Moriarty, Sharon Babala and Jan McCracken. Registration is requested (and appreciated!) to join the practice group which will meet on the 2nd and 4th Thursday of each month at Albany UU. Once registered, you can attend on a drop-in basis. This group is open to people within and outside of our congregation. For more information please contact Jan McCracken at jmcrack@nycap.rr.com or 518-275-8709. To register, see box.

Notes from Joy Library

Joy Library now has (or soon will have) some books related to the recent presidential election. Why did some people vote for Trump? What will it mean as we go forward? Listed below are a few books which interested us. We hope you'll find something of interest to you.

The goal? To put an end to 240 years of free and fair American democratic elections."

”David Cay Johnston, a Pulitzer Prize-winning former New York Times investigative reporter, gives Trump the thorough scrubbing he deserves...Johnston has done voters a service with this unblinking portrait. STRANGERS IN THEIR OWN LAND : ANGER AND MOURNING ON THE AMERICAN RIGHT by Arlie Russell Hochschild (New Press, 2016).[320.52 HOC] “ goes beyond the commonplace liberal idea that these are people who have been duped into voting against their own interests. Instead, Hochschild finds lives ripped apart by stagnant wages, a loss of home, an elusive American dream—and political choices and views that make

Illness

Jan and Reese Satin want to report on Jan's condition. We are sorry if you haven't heard from us yet. It has been difficult for us to make this announcement. In November, Jan discovered that she has pancreatic cancer. She has started chemotherapy. We wish to thank those of you who have sent messages, good wishes, prayers, food, cards and advice. All have been most welcome, appreciated and helpful.

Social Justice

SRC notes

The Social Responsibilities Council (SRC) offers the following poem by Lynn Ungar, Church of the Larger Fellowship, as we face uncertain times ahead. We wish you: Courage, dedication, perseverance and also, hope. RESIST hatred. Stand on the Side of Love.

Breathe, said the wind.

How can I breathe at a time like this,
when the air is full of the smoke of burning tires, burning lives?

Just breathe, the wind insisted.

Easy for you to say, if the weight of injustice is not wrapped around your throat, cutting off all air.

I need you to breathe.

I need you to breathe.

Don't tell me to be calm when there are so many reasons to be angry, so much cause for despair!

I didn't say to be calm, said the wind,
I said to breathe.

We're going to need a lot of air to make this hurricane together.

The UUA and the UUSC have come together with the following:

Declaration of Conscience

At this extraordinary time in our nation's history, we are called to affirm our profound commitment to the fundamental principles of justice, equity and compassion, to truth and core values of American society.

In the face of looming threats to immigrants, Muslims, people of color, and the LGBTQ community and the rise of hate speech, harassment and hate crimes, we affirm our belief in the inherent worth and dignity of every person.

In opposition to any steps to undermine the right of every citizen to vote or to turn back advances in access to health care and reproductive rights, we affirm our commitment to justice and compassion in human relations.

And against actions to weaken or eliminate initiatives to address the threat of climate change – actions that would threaten not only our country but the entire planet – we affirm our unyielding commitment to protect the interdependent web of all existence.

We will oppose any and all unjust government actions to deport, register, discriminate, or despoil.

As people of conscience, we declare our commitment to translate our values into action as we stand on the side of love with the most vulnerable among us.

We welcome and invite all to join in this commitment for justice.

The time is now.

To sign on as individuals, go to: <http://connect.uusc.org/l/103112/2017-01-17/gpqn2>

Community distributed generation

On Sunday, January 22, the Green Sanctuary presented a forum on community distributed generation of electricity (CDG). If you are interested in discussing the various possibilities involved with CDG, please attend our next Green Sanctuary Committee meeting on February 5, at 11:45 p.m. in room B-5.

CDG has long been available in some other states, such as Vermont. It is a program whereby a large solar farm is built to benefit its "member-investors," such as individuals or entities. The energy produced by the CDG, although it does not flow directly to the member-investors' homes, would offset their bill and could potentially result in an end-of-the-year credit if more energy is produced than the members require. For a more complete explanation, refer to the first half hour of the video at <https://www.nyserda.ny.gov/All-Programs/Programs/NY-Sun/Communities/Shared-Solar>.

CDG is new to New York and has various rules attached to it. The advantage to a CDG is that people who rent or have inappropriate roofs can still invest in solar power. This Sunday's forum was presented by one organization that is interested in building a solar farm and acquiring members-investors. Entities can include small corporations -- even churches such as AlbanyUU (only 70% of AlbanyUU's electrical bill is covered by our roof solar panels).

Green Sanctuary Committee suggests:

If you are downsizing or just cleaning up, the Albany Public Library is currently running a Falcons for Sight collection: take your old, used eyeglasses to an APL branch. You'll find a box for them.

Don't forget to bring designated recyclables in to the recycle center located in the Albany UU co-atrium. The Green Sanctuary will be expanding the center so we can collect Bausch and Lomb contact lenses with blister packs, and small lithium batteries from hearing aids, watches, etc. Once or twice a year at designated events, Green Sanctuary may also be collecting rigid plastics -- like plastic utensils, children's sand pails, etc -- that do not have a recycle logo on them. Watch for future announcements.

Raise your voice for End of Life Choice

Albany UUs continue to advocate for terminally ill New Yorkers to have the right to request medical aid in dying, and invite you to join the SRC's End of Life Choices Task Force and its e-group. We are pleased to be joined in our efforts by the UU congregations in Schenectady, Saratoga Springs, and Glens Falls. On January 23, a medical aid in dying bill was introduced in the New York State Assembly and Senate. Although a comparable bill passed the Assembly Health Committee last year, the process must start again with the newly elected legislature and new members of the Health Committees. Once again, you can support the bill by contacting your lawmakers by phone, email, letter, postcard or a visit. If you are not sure who they are, you can find your Assembly Member at <http://nyassembly.gov/mem/search/> and your Senator at <https://www.nysenate.gov/find-my-senator>. This month, you can also help by joining clergy and members of a wide variety of religious denominations at 11:00 a.m. on Valentine's Day, February 14, outside the Senate Chamber in the Capitol. -- Thayer Heath and Nancy Willie-Schiff
