

Building Beloved Community Beyond the Binary

What About No Binaries? A Case for Non-Binary Gender

A day of trans-centered learning beginning with keynote talk by:
Dr. Robyn Henderson-Espinoza

In a world that is over-categorized by binaries, I want to ask the question “what about no binaries?” In an effort to build the beloved community in generative ways, I think we need the case for non-binary orientations. This opens the doors up for abundance, instead of the scarce binary system and imagines a future full of multiplicity and difference.

Robyn Henderson-Espinoza, PhD, is a Transqueer Latinx activist scholar. Their dynamic and inspiring presentations explore the Intersections of queer justice and anti-racism, dismantling white supremacy and displacing whiteness, gender justice as human rights work, and bridging differences within our communities, campuses and churches.
