Quiet Conversation Corner

In order to offer an option to our usual Coffee Hour hubbub a noble experiment has just been started. Designed for persons who don't appreciate the high decibel level in Channing and/or are uncomfortable standing in a crowd, the tentatively named "Quiet Conversation Corner" takes place at the back of Emerson Hall. Chairs and tables are available for persons wishing to sit and talk along with coffee or tea. There will be crackers/cookies instead of bagels. Everyone is welcome to the "QCC", although children will need to be accompanied by an adult and standing will be discouraged. This option is supported by Channing Circle, the Religious Services Committee and the Program Coordinating Council. Comments and suggestions will be most welcome as this approach to congregational connections evolves.—Mark Yolles

Still time to sign up: second Sandy relief trip

We are working with Rev. Susan Karlson, Minister of the Unitarian Church of Staten Island to coordinate our second Sandy Relief Trip. (see article in the Spring UU World) The trip will be on April 12, 13, and 14. We will carpool to Staten Island. Here is part of Susan's latest email to me:

"I talked to two site coordinators today about your group coming April 12-14th. We definitely will have service work for your group of 36 to do. So glad you are coming! blessings aplenty, Susan"

Please let me know as soon as possible if you would like to go on the trip. I have commitments from eight volunteers but we need many more. Contact me at : chuckmanning@hotmail.com or 518-439-4226—Chuck Manning

FUUSA Annual Meeting, Sunday, May 19

All members and friends are encouraged to attend this very important meeting. After all, the decisions to be made will impact our wonderful Society going forward!!! But, it's even better to be able to vote on the issues which come before the Society: for example, our budget for the coming year and the election of new leaders. What does it take to be able to vote - first of all you need to be an active member. Just what is an "active member" you may be wondering? The criteria are simple: to be a member you must indicate your agreement with the purpose of this Society by "signing the book" at least 30 days before the annual meeting - that means you have until April 19 to do so; also, "active" means participation - making a financial pledge and becoming involved. Of course, even if you are an active member you may have a conflict on May 19, and for this reason we have an absentee ballot process. Absentee ballots can be obtained by active members from the FUUSA office. Note - to be valid, they must be returned at least forty-eight hours before the election. Another form which can be obtained from the church office, or from our web site's "file cabinet" (under Table of Contents heading "Church Office"), is a Nominating Petition. Any active member interested in being considered for one of the open positions (see the list in February's Windows) can obtain a petition and secure 25 active member signatures. Petitions must be returned by April 5 and may be placed in the Nominating Committee's mailbox in the office.

To help you identify candidates for office, watch for a Candidate Photo Board in Channing Hall along with biography handouts. May 5 and 12 will also be Candidate Sundays, when special buttons will be worn to help you identify members running for elected office.

If you have any questions regarding this process, members of the Nominating Committee would be happy to talk with you. Committee members are: Meredith Andrews, Debbie Brown, Dawn Dana, Dave Metz, Paula Moskowitz, and Linda Way.

Evensong

A celebration of faith through music
Tuesday, April 30 at 7 p.m.

Please join us again if you've been attending Evensong, or come for a new and hopefully joyful experience of reflection and musical expression. Please also make a note that May 28 will be the last Evensong service in this series. Any feedback about the services would be appreciated, or interest in being involved with organizing and producing these services after May. Contact Reverend Sam or Sue Stierer, who is currently acting as Coordinator.

Conversations on proposed bylaws changes

At its March 21 meeting, the Board of Trustees approved a set of bylaws changes to be voted on at our annual congregational meeting in May. These changes are intended to make the bylaws easier to read; to cover important topics not previously addressed, such as conflicts of interest; and to make other changes that clarify or update the bylaws.

To learn more about these changes and to share your comments, the Bylaws Committee invites you to a congregational conversation, to be held on Sunday, April 7 and again on Sunday, April 14 at 11:45 AM. In addition, the proposed bylaws changes will be discussed at the Program Coordinating Council meeting on Thursday, April 11.

Members of the Bylaws Committee are Bob Franklin, Karen Kaufmann, Kevin Purcell (chair), and Peggy Sherman.

FUUSA gardens--waking up???

I know it is still chilly outside and frost often visits us at night, but I am thinking of spring and playing in the garden. If you are like me, you can't wait to get outside and play in the dirt. The Gardening Committee, affectionately known as the "dirty fingernail" group, is responsible for the "continuation of bloom" in the gardens surrounding our buildings: Heron, Peace Pole, Memorial, and West Street. Of course, our first spring task is to clean up the gardens and get rid of winter debris so the plants can thrive. Clean up day, in past years, has ranged anywhere from May 2 - May 16, depending on how early it warms up. With enough volunteers this task can be completed in just a couple of hours. If you would like to help with this "one shot" task, please let me know (pgmosk@earthlink.net or 439-6347) and I will notify you when we are ready to select a date. If you participated in the past, or signed up to help at Get Connected Sunday, then I probably already have your email address and you will be hearing from me :)

During the summer months we try to schedule two volunteers a week to spend an hour or two tidying up and deadheading our many plants. You will be able to sign up for summer garden maintenance via "Volunteer Spot" on the FUUSA home page (www.albanyuu.org). No volunteer commitment is too small! --Paula Moskowitz

A hanging in Emerson

Almost from the dedication of Emerson Community Hall there have been discussions concerning the possibility and advisability of having one or more hangings in the center above the stage. Some said that the space needs a focal point. Others wanted more color. Still others thought that the space was exactly right just as it was designed and built. The Art and Aesthetics Committee put up a trial hanging for a couple of weeks to see what the reaction might be. They also thought about commissioning a tapestry to be made fashioned after one of Dan Sekellick's paintings but there were no funds available.

A long-term compromise solution that was envisioned included acquiring a number of hangings over time and using them in rotation, where one of the options in the rotation would be no hanging at all. This would include developing a means of raising and lowering hangings easily, perhaps using the same technology that operates the shades on the corner beacon window and the two high windows above the stage. Our own Ps & Qs started making a hanging some time ago as their contribution to the project.

The hanging that has recently been installed in Emerson came to FUUSA as a gift from Dave Metz's brother John and his wife Barbara who have presented several concerts in Emerson over the past four years. The hanging is wool and was made by Barbara's mother, Louise Piranian. Louise dyed the yarn and wove the hanging by hand. Barb's father, George, a well-known mathematician, contributed by calculating how much yarn of each color would be needed to weave the intended design. It hung in the Piranian house in Michigan for perhaps twenty years. When the family downsized following George's death, there was no space suitable for the hanging, so it went to Barbara. John and Barbara offered it to their UU church in New London, CT, but they did not have a suitable space either. They immediately thought of Emerson, in particular the south wall above the stage. This is a permanent gift to FUUSA from them.

Eau de Toilette

For some time there have been complaints from members and renters alike that there was an odious odor in the basement of Emerson. The source of this has finally been found and, we think, fixed. It turns out that the toilet in the handicap stall of the Ladies Room in the basement had somehow been shifted from its original position. This caused a breach of the wax seal that is designed to prevent spillage and/or back drafts of sewer gas. How that happened is a mystery since these things are generally designed not to move. To make a long story short, the toilet was removed recently and the wax seal replaced. So far, so good. If anyone notices such a malodor, please notify me or the staff. Thanks. Dave Metz 330-6389.

Fight hunger in our community

The CROP in CROP Hunger Walk stands for "Communities Responding to Overcome Poverty." Will you join our community in raising funds to alleviate hunger at home and around the world? Come together with your fellow FUUSAns and hundreds of your Capital Region neighbors in the CROP Hunger Walk on Sunday, May 5. We're also looking for people to work on registration on Walk Day, so there's a way to help even if you don't want to walk. See Dawn Dana at coffee hours starting on April 7 to sign up to walk, help, or pledge your support.

Rite of Passage Service, Sunday, May 12

Yes, it's Mother's Day, but I hope you'll make attending the Sunday service part of your day. The Rite of Passage program is offered to 9th and 10th graders. This program helps youth to explore their own beliefs and values and to understand what it means to embrace Unitarian Universalism as an adult. "RoP" is separate from the Youth Group program and youth and mentors must apply to participate. The youth and mentors meet regularly through the year and attend monthly meetings with Rev. Sam and me. The youth/mentor pairs also participate in a service project together. In April the group takes a trip to Boston to visit UU offices and historical sites.

The service is a celebration of the program and gives the congregation an opportunity to learn what these youth value and where they are on their Unitarian Universalist path. Afterwards, you could have lunch at one of the many restaurants in our neighborhood and also go to the Tulip Festival in Washington Park. http://www.albanyevents.org/events/event_detail.cfm?ID=2—Leah Purcell

Joy Library notes

The Better Angels of Our Nature: Why Violence Has Declined by Steven Pinker. Viking. 2012

ON ORDER to be cataloged at [302 PIN] Expected by March 31, 2013.

"...The perception that humane values seem in some sense favored by the universe is not just the fruit of occult awareness, gained by studying the entrails of birds or the rolling of bones. The moral arc, its bend toward justice, is conclusion hard to deny precisely because of the exhaustive evidence Pinker himself has amassed.

"The late Rev. Dr. Forrest Church taught that "God is not God's name... God is our name for that which is greater than all." Pinker looks deeply into a great deal of that which is greater than all. He can be said to have looked into the nature of God, or better, "God." Whether one is an ethical skeptic or one for whom the grain of the universe runs congruent with humane values or someone somewhere in between, what Pinker sees there is both consoling and inspiring. The Better Angels of Our Nature deserves widespread attention." Rev. Dr. John H. Weston, UU World Spring, 2013. 53-54.

groups of six to nine people. Everyone is welcome, singles and couples, regardless of dietary restrictions. We encourage families with young children to attend or host a multi-generational dinner.

This is the last Circle Dinner of the church year, but we have scheduled six dinners for next year, beginning on October 12.

If you would like to attend, you can complete the sign-up form in Channing Hall or email Martha at mmusser@nycap.rr.com. Channing Circle meets
Monday, April 15 at noon

Channing Circle is a brown bag lunch group that meets the third Monday of each month. Membership is open ended. New participants are always welcome!!

After lunch (with settings, coffee, tea or cocoa supplied and with dessert provided by one or more volunteers) there usually is a discussion or program. In April we may try out a new way to get to know each other--with an Edward R. Murrow type of interview of one or more member(s) by volunteer interviewers from the group. Check the Windows Preview the week before for final details. Save the date--4/15--if not already circled on your calendar!

Calendar changes

Two events which were on the Major Events planning calendar for this year will not be taking place. The spring Rummage Sale has been cancelled due to a dearth of volunteers. And the Plant Sale scheduled for the first weekend in June has been cancelled as many of the volunteers who work on the plant sale also work on the joint CRUUNY service which is planned for the same weekend.

What are you doing October 18 – 20?

Going to UU Weekend at Silver Bay of course!

Planning is well underway to ensure that our 20th Annual opportunity to gather in friendship and community at the Silver Bay resort on beautiful Lake George is our best ever. For example, storytellers are encouraged to participate in sharing narratives around the bonfire on Friday and Saturday evenings; Rev David Weissbard will lead the service on Sunday morning; and, Professor Sheldon Solomon of Skidmore College will present the Jeanne Blank lecture. Professor Solomon is widely respected for his publications and ongoing studies of the functions of self-esteem and the effects of the uniquely human awareness of death on thoughts, feelings, and behavior.

In celebration of our 20th year, a 20% discount on the cost of the weekend is available to all those who sign up by June 9. In addition, newcomers to UU

Walker Book Club

Join the Walker Book Club for the next book discussion on Sunday, April 14, 2013. We gather in Channing Hall at 5:30 PM.

This informal group offers participants the opportunity to search for UU truth and meaning by reading and discussing a wide-range of fiction and nonfiction books. Newcomers are always welcome and the book club is open to all FUUSA members and friends.

The discussion is preceded by a welcoming potluck supper, followed by a lively discussion of the book of the month. Bring your favorite dish to share and a small contribution to cover beverages. Use dishes etc. at FUUSA and help with the dishwasher or be green and bring your own.

On April 14 we will discuss In the Garden of Beasts: Love, Terror and an American Family in Hitler's Berlin, by Erik Larson.

On May 12 we will discuss Cry, the Beloved Country, by South African author Alan Paton. This classic, written in 1948, is a social protest against the structures of the society that passed and institutionalized apartheid later the same year the book was published.

Teens reflect on attending DC climate rally
Three of our youth – Johanna Panetta, Anita Rice and Ava Champion – were sponsored by SRC to attend the largest climate rally in US history on Feb. 17 in Washington, DC. As reported in last month's Windows, it was an epic day, including attending service at All Souls Unitarian with dozens of other visiting UUs and later joining with 40,000 other demonstrators against the Keystone pipeline and for constructive action on climate change. Last month we published Johanna's inspired message to SRC and here are the reflections of our other youth attendees:

I felt that I really was helping to do a part in being against the KXL pipeline when I was at the rally. Being there made me feel like my voice could be heard because yes, I'm just one individual, but many individuals equal huge numbers. Being a part of 40,000 people all wanting their voices to be heard really inspired me. When the general population wants to be heard, they are indeed heard by important figures like the president and his representatives. I felt that, when we were in such a close distance to the White House, that we were really making a difference, because people can't ignore a large group of people coming so close to such an important building in the U.S. Although I am only one voice, many voices equals a big outcome. No matter the President's final verdict on the pipeline, I know that we, as a people, have been heard.--Anita Rice

I am very happy that the SRC gave me the opportunity to go to the climate rally. It means a lot to me that I was able to gain the experience, as it taught me some life valuable lessons. It showed me how much people care, and how people care so much that they will organize something like the Climate rally. It also was such a privilege to see so many people, who did not know each other, work together, and share their one thing in common; their decision against the Keystone pipe line. It also felt very empowering to rally, and show my opinion, which might not have been heard without all the help from the other people at the rally.

Thank you so much, --Ava Champion

Kick off your Earth Day Weekend with a 2009 Sundance award winning movie at FUUSA. No Impact Man is a documentary about a family that forgoes any activity which will affect the environment. They even give up electricity. This movie is a playful, engaging look at their challenges and relationships during the year in which they experimented with this lifestyle. A thoughtful and entertaining way to start your Earth Day weekend.

Let's keep Souper Sunday going!

Sam's Outlook

A microaggression observed

I probably wouldn't have noticed the "microaggression" if I hadn't just attended the Unitarian Universalist Allies for Racial Equity Annual Meeting in Rockford, Illinois and just had the third session of Mark Hicks "Beloved Conversations" facilitator's training Monday evening on "microaggressions." A Microaggression is an act or communication to someone, particularly someone who is part of a marginalized group, that they experience as a slight, insult, invalidation or indignity. That everyday, marginalizing communication acts to express prejudice, bias and discrimination.

Derald Wing Sue writes in the book Microaggressions in Everyday Life:

The power of microaggressions lies in their invisibility to the perpetrator, who is unaware that he or she has engaged in a behavior that threatens and demeans the recipient of such a communication...the greatest harm to people of color, women and LGBTs does not come from [overt] perpetrators. It is not the White supremacists, the Ku Klux Klan members or Skinheads, ... but instead well-intentioned people, who are strongly motivated by egalitarian values, believe in their own morality, and experience themselves as fair-minded and decent people who would never consciously discriminate.

That description ... would be me in this particular situation. I was organizing a meeting, looking for a time when several people could meet. Many of us lead very busy lives with lots of commitments. Trying to find a time to meet can be very unpleasant because of this, with lots of emails back and forth. I finally got just about everyone together on one date and time. One more person to go. This person was someone I hadn't yet reached out to in the date setting process. My intention had been to call and ask if this date would work. That isn't what came out of my mouth. Wanting agreement to the date, I said, "We've set this time and date for the meeting, can you come?" I encountered resistance to the date and time as it was short notice. Rather than asking for a better date and time, I said, "Well, could you come for some of the meeting? Or if you can't come, can I relay what you would have said if you were there?"

This didn't seem like a big deal ... until I reflected on the unspoken, unintended message I was sending. By saying we'd already set the meeting date, I'd marginalized the participation of this person. I further marginalized the individual by minimizing participation, almost saying, “It isn't important whether you attend or not.” That wasn't the intentional message I wanted to send. It was the unintended, invisible (to me) message I was sending. I felt it at the time because I heard hesitancy and resistance in the response. I didn't pay attention to those feelings, however, and got a reluctant agreement to attend.

And, the person in question is a person of color.

The next morning, it hit me. What I had done? As I sat quietly in meditation, I realized I'd been a perpetrator of a microaggression. Immediately I felt shame and guilt. Here I am striving to be an ally for people of color. I felt remorse for my behavior and regret for shifting my discomfort onto another person's shoulders.

Then I reflected on the experience of the person who has been the target of a microaggression. She (or he) has already experienced unpleasant feelings. She may be conflicted about having those feelings toward her minister even though normally having positive and appreciative feelings. Most importantly for me in this moment of self-judgment, she may be very relieved and open to be approached by me to resolve this situation, receive my apology, make my conscious intentions clear, and make amends.

We all are carriers of toxic relationship patterns that get acted out usually when we are under stress and not operating out of our best selves. When we see those behaviors, part of the shame and guilt come from identifying with those patterns as “mine.” The path to freedom is to dis-identify with the pattern and renounce it. A great way to do that is to recognize it clearly, apologize for it, assert one's positive values that were transgressed and work to undo any harm it has caused. In this situation, I don't want to be disrespectful to anyone, nor do I want to manipulate others to fit into my agenda.

Microaggressions are just that, little. But add them up on a daily basis and they turn into a very big deal. My hope is that if we make a conscious commitment to make a habit of addressing them as we become aware of them, they will be much less of a big deal. Think of addressing them as a way of practicing kindness toward each other. We may not be able to eliminate all of them, but by making a habit of addressing them, they will lose their power. It can be one micro way to take one more burden of oppression away from those who have been historically marginalized.

Stuff and Time

I am sitting in a house that is no longer a home thinking about the inter-dependent web of life. Barb and I have nearly finished cleaning out her parents' house. We had a “moving” sale yesterday. A bunch of stuff was sold. Once we take out the trash, there will be nothing here that is left of their life. Except the house which they built together from 1954 to 1956.

As we were cleaning out their home, we found stuff that they had forgotten about. It was like a historic review of Jim and Dot's life together. We found letters that they had written to each other in the 1940's. He had gone into the Air Force at 18, right after graduating from high school in 1944. Jim went to navigator school and flew on B-17s. By the time he got to England, the war in Europe was over. After a few flights over France, he came home. She took the train and visited him in North Dakota. Soon they got married in Binghamton. Then they spent 10 days in a hotel in Atlantic City, courtesy of the US Government. Jim was re-assigned to Houston, TX. In 1945 he was discharged. They started out on a drive to Binghamton, in a 1936 Chevrolet, with bad tires. No job was waiting, Dot was pregnant (with Barb), and they got a flat tire the second day out. Luckily, Jim was wearing his uniform and they found a generous mechanic at a garage who gave them four new tires. They moved in with Jim's parents.

Jim got a job at Universal Instruments in Binghamton. We found a 16" X 20" picture of the shop floor with him standing at a punch press. He worked there for 40 years moving from the factory floor to an office job.

The blue prints for the house were on a shelf in the closet. The paper was brittle -- Residence Plan #1139 from the Home Building Plan Service in Portland, OR. Building the house became a high priority after Barb's sister was born. With help from friends and family, construction began, but it was not going fast enough. In 1955 the family of four moved into a small camping trailer on the property. Heat was provided by a kerosene heater and they had an out-house. After a winter in the trailer, they moved into their partially completed home in 1956. Jim put down a section of wood floor in the living room so they could have a Christmas Tree for their first Christmas in their new home. We found some decorations in a box from that first tree.

Once they were in the house, the hard times were over. Dot started working at Prudential and they entered the Middle Class. We sorted through old photos that started in black and white, progressed through Polaroid and finally were in color. Barb's third sister was born and the family took trips to Long Island each summer to visit cousins on Long Island. The kids grew up, left home, went to college, got married and had kids.

Jim and Dot started trailer camping and toured the United States – lots of pictures with camping groups having a good time in beautiful places. Those camping experiences were a big part of their later lives together. There were more pictures from their 2 to 3 month stays in a “park” model trailer in Florida. They told us many of their camping and Florida stories, but we did not save the pictures.

Right after Thanksgiving last year, Barb, her sisters and I helped them move into a new apartment in Vestal. At the “moving sale”, we sold a lot of stuff, but none of it defined who they are. We tried to take as much of the “meaningful” stuff as we could comfortably fit into their new place. Family pictures are on the wall, the 1940's letters are in a box in the closet, and they have their same bedroom furniture. The apartment is still not home, but we hope it can be sometime. Without their love, their struggles, and their successes, Barb and I would not be here together. That's one way of looking at the interdependent web of life. —Chuck

Opportunities for Senior High Youth this spring and summer and why it matters to you

Seven of our youth recently attended the District “Con” at the Schenectady congregation. That was the highest number of youth attending an event outside FUUSA in several years. Cons are weekend events hosted by youth groups at their church buildings for youth and include workshops, worship and activities for UU youth from all over upstate NY to get to know each other. There were about 75 people at the Schenectady con. I've heard from the Schenectady advisors that our youth are starting to get to know other youth. And there is a particular bond forming between the youth groups of the Albany and Schenectady congregations.

Participating in UU sponsored events beyond FUUSA can be a powerful and wonderful experience for youth to strengthen their religious identity. Most of us at FUUSA found Unitarian Universalism as adults and so we are here by our own choice. Youth were born into or brought to our congregation. For them, experiencing the wider UU world is their avenue to build up their knowledge of and commitment to Unitarian Universalism.

Our Rite of Passage program (which we offer to 9th and 10th grade students) offers the participants a glimpse of the wider UU world when we take our trip to Boston. They learn more about how Unitarians and Unitarian Universalists are a part of US history. And they experience how Unitarian Universalists impact the nation and the world when we visit the offices of the UUSC and the UUA. But one of the most exciting things for the youth is meeting other groups of UU youths who are visiting Boston at the same time.

I am working on communicating with parents about upcoming opportunities for youth from our District, our Region and our Unitarian Universalist Association. But I think it's important for the entire congregation to be aware of these events, because other adults might be able to lend support. For example, the youth are invited to District Assembly this month and they might need rides from FUUSAns who are planning to attend. The same is true for adults attending UULTI - the Goldmine program for youth will be held at the same time and place. And the Board has already identified funds in our budget to help offset travel costs for youth and their chaperones attending GA.

Below are upcoming events and their links. Yes, I know it's a lot. But take a look and if you're interested, but don't know where to start, connect with me. I can help you find a good fit.

In joy and service,

Leah
